in the valleys and on the slopes. Prospectors of diversified background searched for precious metals in veins and in stream gravels. Hopes and fortunes were won and lost; living conditions were severe and uncertain. Disease, hunger, accidents, and inadequate medical care promoted cemetery growth. Today, scattered throughout the mountains, are many fascinating relics (ghosts) of these early times--collapsed log cabins, headframes, cable-tram towers, foundations of homes and mills, rusted equipment, abandoned wagon trails and railroad grades, ocherosus mine dumps, tunnels, and mill trailings. These relics are rapidly fading into oblivion because of vandalism, fire, snowslides, floods, and normal progressive decay. The next 100 years will claim all except those preserved in museums. To place on photographic record as of 1974 some of these relics, is the objective of Fading Shadows. --from the book jacket.

Originally published in 1947, this book chronicles the assassination attempts on Adolf Hitler, both of which Fabian von Schlabrendorff, a major leader in the resistance against Hitler, played a direct role. The first attempt took place on 13 March 1943: During a visit by Adolf Hitler to Army Group Center

Headquarters in Smolensk, Schlabrendorff smuggled a time bomb, disguised as bottles of cognac, onto the aircraft which carried Hitler back to Germany.

The bomb detonator failed to go off, however, most likely due of the cold in the aircraft luggage
compartment.

Schlabrendorff managed to retrieve the bomb the next day and elude detection. A further attempt followed on 20 July 1944: Claus von Stauffenberg and other conspirators, including Schlabrendorff, attempted to kill Hitler inside his Wolf ' s Lair field headquarters near Rastenburg, East Prussia, in what would become known as Operation Valkyrie. The plot was the culmination of the efforts by several groups in the German resistance to overthrow the Nazi German government. The failure of the assassination and the military coup d ' é tat which was planned to follow led to the arrest of at least 7,000 people by the Gestapo—including Schlabrendorff—of whom 4,980 were executed.

But twenty years into this movement, breakthrough innovations are still rare, and most companies find that 50 to 90 percent of their innovation initiatives flop. The cost of these failures to U.S. companies alone is estimated to be well over $100 billion annually. In a book that challenges everything you have learned about being customer driven, internationally acclaimed innovation leader Anthony Ulwick reveals the secret weapon behind some of the most successful companies of recent years. Known as "outcome-driven" innovation, this revolutionary approach to new product and service creation transforms innovation from a nebulous art into a rigorous science from which randomness and uncertainty are eliminated. Based on more than 200 studies spanning more than seventy companies and twenty-five industries, Ulwick contends that, when it comes to innovation, the traditional methods companies use to communicate with customers are the root cause of chronic waste and missed opportunity. In What Customers Want, Ulwick demonstrates that all popular qualitative research methods yield well-intentioned but unfitting and dreadfully misleading information that serves to derail the innovation process. Rather than accepting customer inputs such as "needs," "benefits," "specifications," and "solutions," Ulwick argues that researchers should silence the literal "voice of the customer" and focus on the "metrics that customers use to measure success when executing the jobs, tasks or activities they are trying to get done." Using these customer desired outcomes as inputs into the innovation process eliminates much of the chaos and variability that typically derails innovation initiatives. With the same profound insight, simplicity, and uncommon sense that propelled The Innovator's Solution to worldwide acclaim, this paradigm-changing book details an eight-step approach that uses outcome-driven thinking to dramatically improve every aspect of the innovation process--from segmenting markets and identifying opportunities to creating, evaluating, and positioning breakthrough concepts. Using case studies from Microsoft, Johnson & Johnson, AIG, Pfizer, and other leading companies, What Customers Want shows companies how to:

- Obtain unique customer inputs that make predictable innovation possible
- Recognize opportunities for disruption, new market creation, and core market growth--well before competitors do
- Identify which ideas, technologies, and acquisitions have the greatest potential for

The Ten Commandments; an Interpretation; Or, The Constitution of the Spiritual Universe

Randy tried to encourage Ben in his current dilemma. "There are circumstances when all we can do is accept our conditions. It's important to trust in the Lord and have faith that things happen for a reason." "I'm having a hard time seeing the reason for what's happening." "I don't mean reason from a rational perspective. We have to believe that good can come from bad circumstances," Randy explained.

"Great lessons and strength can come from terrible experiences."

"We are in a perpetual hell and face a moral dilemma. This reminds me of a Twilight Zone episode where a guy is trapped in a terrifying environment." "Vietnam is a hall of mirrors. We can't find an exit, and the images are distorted moral characterizations of ourselves," Randy agreed. "Well, if things happen for a reason, I wish there was a less traumatic way to learn," Ben whispered.

"Sometimes people learn their greatest lessons from the school of hard knocks." "But I'll go crazy before I graduate," Ben sighed.

Excerpt: ... for which he had nothing to allege but that he had followed the example of the Consuls at Gibraltar and Lisbon. He had sent blank commissions for privateering from Buenos Ayres to this country, stipulating that the prizes should be sent to Buenos Ayres, consigned to him, with a commission for him of five per cent. upon the sales. He had gone over to Artigas, bought blank privateering commissions of him, and sold them at Buenos Ayres, in violation of the laws of the place. He had once been ordered to quit Buenos Ayres within twenty-four hours by the Supreme Director Pueyrredon, and De Forrest came with a positive demand that he should be removed. For his privateering concern, he had only to say that he thought it accorded with the views of this Government, because Aguirre had been suffered to build armed ships here and send them to Buenos Ayres, because there had been so many armaments from Baltimore under the eye of the Government which had not been prevented, and because Carrera had been particularly assisted from this country. I told him that nothing of this was justification for him. The Government had never in any of those cases either sanctioned or connived at any violation of the laws, which they must have done by leaving his conduct unnoticed. He then said he had a claim against the Government of Buenos Ayres, in behalf of which he desired the interposition of this Government, and left the papers concerning it with me for examination. He had also a Consular account to settle at the Treasury, many charges of which, the Fifth Auditor, Pleasanton, declined admitting, without my approbation. He left this account also with me. I sent my unsigned note to General Vives. 4th. Mr. Hyde de Neuville brought to me at the office an v unsigned...

Accompanied by hundreds of previously unpublished archival and contemporary photographs, award-winning historian Daniel Francis delivers a fascinating account of the first hundred years of trucking in BC. Beginning in Vancouver with James Starks first delivery van in 1907, motorized transport exploded in the province, soon traversing every dirt track, hauling logs on temporary plank roads and leading to a frenzy of experimentation and innovation from the failed Renard Road Train and early battery-operated vehicles to some truly impressive purpose-built trucks, many of them manufactured in BC.
